2005-present	Psychological Evaluations for Departments of Social Services

Comprehensive psychological evaluations requested by Foster Care and Protective Services Social Workers. These evaluations of parents are conducted in the forensic model of using multiple methods of data collection; clinical interview, psychological testing, review of records, and telephone interviews with collateral sources of information. Specifically, these evaluations assess the overall level of psychological functioning, including the level of cognitive functioning, as it pertains to parenting competencies and skills. These cases involve allegations of child neglect, child physical and emotional abuse, and child sexual abuse. A detailed written report is provided outlining the full data collection with a clearly defined summary and recommendations.
